Dive into sociodrama, 'Five Faces of Oppression', and Butler's dodgeball insights. Explore the ongoing conversation about games' impact on children, unraveling hidden oppressions and dominance. Gain practical insights to shape inclusive education, fostering fresh perspectives.

Participants will address and explore:

- How can common children's games contribute to a system of oppression, considering Iris Marion Young's Five Faces of Oppression framework?
- What are two sociodramatic elements that are helpful in addressing social change?
- What are some ways to alter common children's games to minimize oppression?
- What are two trauma-informed practices to assist with working with groups?

We invite you to this creative and cost-effective workshop as part of PTO's 2024 Annual Conference. Stay for the day, or enjoy the whole conference and special post-conference event.
